"PROTECTAST LANDMARKS" is the name of a work just issued from the press of Mesers. McLear & O., publishers, Toronto. It includes Burion's "Ristory of the Mesers and the second of Great Britain, Ireland, &c., "together with a "Sympsis of the Orange Society, its formation and causes, with leading events down to data." The book is well worth a perusal, its object being to show the vastness of the doth of gratitude due, under the providence of God, from Canada and the whole world to that illustrious family from which decended that immortal here and patriot, William, Prince of Orange. The insettinable obligations of the whole world for the imperiabable results of his heroic and uniting labors in the cause of civil and religious liberty can never be told in full for want of appropriate works. The careful perusal of as ounparalleled a narrative as that of the Life, Labors and Trimuph of the Prince of Orange, gives occasion for wonder, admiration and thanksgiving that so noble a specimen of humanity was, in the providence of God, raised up to do so important a work at the right time.

"Why don't you see the captain!" asked one, and Connor jumped at the engression. In a few minutes he stood before the port-ly, rubicund man, who nedded to him very kindly.

She's left behind," said Connor.
She did start with us," said the cap tain.

""Where is she ?" said Connor.

"The captain made no answer.

"My man," "we all have our triGod sends them. Yes, Nore started us,"

Conner said nothing. He was looking OYSTERS! OYSTERS at the captain now, white to his lips.

"You know now money."
"The ship I came in did that," said Connor. "Did yo say Norn went sahore) I ought to be looking for her, captain,."
"Many didod," went on the captain,
"many children. When we were half way here your boy was taken very sick."
"Jamesy," gasped Connor,
